The following accreditations have lapsed; however, each program has submitted paperwork seeking reaccreditation. Reaccreditation is not guaranteed. Prospective students considering these programs should be aware of the following:

Programs are generally not inspected (i.e., subjected to an on-site evaluation by the EAC) until the 9th week of what are generally 10-week courses. While accreditation is not guaranteed, historically, most programs with a history of meeting the APA's accreditation standards will successfully be reaccredited. However, final accreditation decisions will not be made until after the course is completed, and graduation from an APA-accredited program is a requirement of APA membership. The fact that a program's accreditation has lapsed does not necessarily signify anything derogatory about a program; E.g., some seek reaccreditation in a timely fashion but must delay the site evaluation due to an insufficient number of students to host a basic course prior to expiration.
